

My name is Katie Mangelsdorf. I am a life-long Alaskan and Christian Scientist, married to a wonderful life-long Christian Scientist whose teacher is your teacher, Harvey Wood. We have three beautiful married children, two of whom are expecting their first child a week apart this spring! So I guess you can say I am truly blessed!

My background is that of an elementary teacher. I began substitute teaching in 7th and 8th grade. I have absolutely no idea why the principle of our state-operated school chose me to substitute, but he sure set me on course for a wonderful career! I taught in Bush Alaska in an Athabascan village and an Eskimo village and was a principal-teacher. Then I moved into the Anchorage area and was an elementary school librarian and classroom teacher. Seeing literary needs for my students led to my writing three books—and then articles for our periodicals, which are listed below.

I met my husband at the Anchorage church and eight years later we got married. We were rather slow getting it together, but boy has it been worth it!! Ron was a carpenter before he went into the practice of Christian Science, so we were able to build our own home with the help of our three young children. Now that was quite the adventure!

I never could have accomplished what I did without this blessed understanding of divine Science! And then marrying Ron was frosting on the cake! Harvey was such an important influence in Ron's life and our family got to reap the rewards of Harvey's excellent teaching!

Christian Science makes life such a grand adventure and I am so looking forward to meeting all of you in September.
